The Experiential Advocacy Program at Vermont Law School is where engaged faculty, small class sizes, and real-life learning lead to the development of real-life legal skills like drafting, counseling, interviewing, mediating, negotiating, listening, and persuading. Whether in the classroom or out in the community, our students push each other—and support each other—as they work together to confront and resolve problems. They tackle the work of lawyering—confronting legal, professional and ethical issues—and, in collaboration with each other and the community, they learn to lead.

A PLACE FOR

collaborative

PROBLEM-SOLVING

The Experiential Advocacy Program at Vermont Law School is where engaged faculty, small class sizes, and real-life learning lead to the development of real-life legal skills like drafting, counseling, interviewing, mediating, negotiating, listening, and persuading. Whether in the classroom or out in the community, our students push each other—and support each other—as they work together to confront and resolve problems. They tackle the work of lawyering—confronting legal, professional and ethical issues—and, in collaboration with each other and the community, they learn to lead.